Protect the Environment

Are you familiar with an Indigenous worldview, which honors the oneness of life and that humanity is a reciprocal part of nature?

How does this compare with how you view your relationship with nature and our environment?

How many ways do you rely on water in your community? Consider the various usages such as personal, business, agricultural and industrial.

What does water conservation and protection mean to you as an individual? And in your community?

Protect the Environment

We have no choice but to consume plants and/or animals for our survival, but when we do so, how can we also honor and acknowledge that life? If the Earth sustains us, do we have a responsibility to sustain the Earth in return? What does this mean for you?

Two large, light-orange brushstroke-style shapes that serve as a writing area for the reader's response to the reflection questions.

Call to Action

We invite you to:

1. Choose an environmental concern or issue that is close to your heart or community.
2. Consider how your choices as an individual impact this environmental concern.
3. Set a personal short-term and long-term goal that helps protect the environment from this issue.

Two large, light-green brushstroke-style shapes that serve as a writing area for the reader's call to action.
